Dear Dean Barbour,

The College of Family and Consumer Sciences supports the creation of the graduate area of emphasis "Community Nutrition" submitted by the Department of Foods and Nutrition. This area of emphasis will be very appealing to future graduate programs in our non-thesis Master's programs. As outlined in the proposal, this area of emphasis is designed to meet student's career goals including positions in school nutrition, extension, and community outreach. It will offer the opportunity to students to prepare to meet most requirements for certification as School Nutrition Directors. It will also allow county extension agents to meet the requirement of holding a master's degree and it will allow dietitians and nutritionists currently working in the community to become better informed and remain competitive in their jobs.

The area of emphasis has been routed, reviewed, endorsed and approved as follows:

- October 7, 2016 Informal discussion by FDN Curriculum Committee
- November 4, 2016 Review and approval by FDN Curriculum Committee
- November 10, 2016 Approved by FDN Graduate Committee
- November 11, 2016 Approved by FDN Faculty at faculty meeting
- November 15, 2016 Approved by Family and Consumer Sciences Curriculum Committee
- November 18, 2016 Approved by Family and Consumer Sciences Dean

We greatly appreciate the assistance of The Graduate School with the approval process for this area of emphasis.
